Bharat Steel to shape global dialogue on the future of steel

As India prepares to host Bharat Steel 2026, the country is emerging as a key platform for global dialogue on the future of steelmaking. The two-day summit in New Delhi will bring together policymakers, industry leaders, technology pioneers and investors to deliberate on critical challenges facing the sector, including building resilient supply chains, fostering innovation-led growth and accelerating the transition to low-emission steel production.

Prime Minister Narendra Modi has consistently highlighted steel as the backbone of modern economies, noting its central role in infrastructure development, manufacturing and national growth. Linking the sector's expansion to India's aspiration of becoming a USD 5 trillion economy, the Prime Minister's vision forms the cornerstone of the Bharat Steel summit, which aims to chart a global roadmap at a time of economic uncertainty and increasing focus on sustainability and net-zero commitments.

India's leadership in the sector is underpinned by ambitious capacity targets of 300 million tonnes by 2030 and 500 million tonnes by 2047. To achieve these goals, the country is prioritising innovation, digitalisation and sustainable practices. Green steel initiatives, advanced manufacturing technologies and policy measures such as the Production Linked Incentive scheme for specialty steel are expected to be major themes of discussion.

With participation from over 700 global delegates, the summit will reinforce India's commitment to a secure, competitive and future-ready steel ecosystem, aligned with the broader vision of Viksit Bharat 2047.
